BRIEF DESCRIPTION

The luxurious 453-room hotel is situated on five prime oceanfront acres on the beach at Waikiki and comprised of five, low-density buildings ranging in height from two to 17 stories, all surrounded by open courtyards, serene gardens and breathtaking views of Diamond Head and the Pacific Ocean.

Guest facilities include three award-winning restaurants, three cocktail lounges, pool, spa, fitness room, business center / hospitality suite, in-house laundry, dry cleaning facility, print shop, bakery, florist and five meeting and banquet rooms.

HISTORY

The original Halekulani began in 1907 as a residential hotel called "Hau Tree" owned by Robert Lewers. It consisted of a beachfront home and five bungalows.

In 1917, Juliet and Clifford Kimball purchased the hotel, gradually expanded it and established it as a stylish resort for wealthy vacationers and named it Halekulani, which means "House Befitting Heaven." A name bestowed upon the now iconic hotel by Hawaiian fishermen of the 1900's.

In the 1930s, the Kimballs tore down the old Lewers Home and replaced it with a plantation mansion-style Main Building with a high-pitched hip roof to catch the cooling trade winds. Also known as the "Dickey" roof, it is a trademark of Hawaii's legendary architect C.W. Dickey.

Following the Kimballs' passing, the Norton Clapp family of Seattle bought Halekulani in 1962 with its Main Building and 37 one-and two-story bungalows and sold it in 1981 to Mitsui Fudosan (USA), Inc. which formed the Honolulu-based division, Halekulani Corporation. The hotel was then closed and the aging bungalows demolished to make way for a world-class hotel.

Today, the historic Main Building has been restored and preserved along with coconut palms and a century-old Kiawe tree that celebrates the soul and original hospitality of this once residence.
