Interior

SpaHalekulani's design evokes nostalgic feelings of an era long ago. It showcases art and artifacts from Hawaii and South Pacific. It also accentuates architectural elements from Pacific and Asian cultures such as a sliding Japanese door; tropical wooden-grass window dressings in the Sudari-style; bleached tropical wood from Thailand; bamboo detailing and tumbled stone pebbles from Thailand.

Completing the spa's calming interiors are images of Hawaii's beautiful flora and fauna by Big Island artist Lani Yamasaki and oil paintings by renowned American artists, Shirley Russell and Ben Norris.

The Experience

According to oral history handed down through generations, early Hawaiians viewed Waikiki as a place of hospitality and healing. Gray's Beach, fronting Halekulani, was known for its healing waters, or kawehewehe. Hawaiians are known to have sought relief from their ailments at this wondrous stretch of ocean which included a freshwater channel that ran through the reef.

SpaHalekulani is an award-winning, intimate, and sophisticated experience enveloping guests in a spiritual and physical enlightenment which transcends expectations.
